Letter 56

17th November 2021

Dear Parent/Carer

Home Study

As you are aware, there is no home study arrangement in place for our Sixth Form students at The Hemel Hempstead School. I am writing to inform you that there will be an exception to this rule for a short period during late November and early December.

Year 13 students will be sitting their trial examinations beginning Thursday 25th November. Trial exams are being held in the Sixth Form Study Room (M9) from Tuesday 30th November. As a result, this room is not accessible to Sixth Form students for independent study.

We have therefore decided to allow home study for Sixth Form students during study periods for the period Tuesday 30th November up to, and including, Friday 10th December. Taught lessons will continue on site as normal during this time.

During this period students must continue to sign in using their security badge when they come on to school site, and scan out when they leave. It will be assumed that students are off-site for study periods unless they have scanned in. Please continue to report illness and absence using the Sixth Form absence line or email address.

The library, sixth form café, senior quad and empty classrooms will still be available for any students unable to study at home during this time.

As of Monday 13th December all students will be expected to be back on school site during study periods as normal.

Yours faithfully

Mr P Bryson
Head of Sixth Form
